

Forum Energy Technologies Announces the Acquisition of J-Mac Tool

February 3, 2015

HOUSTON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Feb. 3, 2015-- Forum Energy Technologies, Inc. (NYSE: FET) announced today that it has acquired J-Mac Tool, Inc. (J-Mac).

J-Mac, located in Fort Worth, Texas, manufactures high quality hydraulic fracturing pumps, power ends, fluid ends, and other pump accessories. J-Mac also provides repair and refurbishment services for power ends and fluid ends at its main Fort Worth facility and at service centers located in the Eagle Ford and Permian basins. The former owners of J-Mac have retained the pumping equipment integration and controls business.

Cris Gaut, Forum's Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, commented, "Forum's strong financial position allows us to make opportunistic acquisitions in this market. The acquisition of J-Mac will increase the range of products in our Flow Equipment product line and expand our offering of critical equipment, consumable products and aftermarket services provided to the pressure pumping market. We will now be able to provide our customers the full suite of pumps, replacement power and fluid ends, manifolds, valves and treating iron. We see opportunity to expand the market for J-Mac's products by utilizing our existing sales and distribution network. We welcome the employees of J-Mac to the Forum family."
